CPD LEAPS INTO THE DIGITAL FUTURE

A New Initiative Exploring Digital Cooperation via Multi Stakeholder Diplomacy

Information technology is re-writing the rules of our digital future. Such developments—from the Internet of Things to the “sharing economy” to automation and the “future of work”—call for a new set of global public policies to facilitate these technological advances as well as to safeguard the rights of the consumer/public. To successfully navigate this rapidly-evolving, increasingly complicated, transnational policy arena requires unprecedented international cooperation and cross-sector collaboration. However, current frameworks and structures have not yet caught up to the speed and scope of change as far as global policymaking and public engagement are concerned. This Fall, CPD set about correcting this knowledge shortfall in the hopes of bridging the worlds of business and diplomacy to reimagine their roles and linkages.

On October 24, CPD and the Embassy of Sweden in Washington, D.C. jointly hosted a program at the House of Sweden to explore collaborations between the business sector and public diplomacy to shape the digital future. CPD Advisory Board member Fadi Chehadé (pictured below) from the U.N. Secretary-General’s High-level Panel on Digital Cooperation provided analysis of the diminishing public trust in technology and outlined new possibilities for horizontal models of digital cooperation. His full talk can be heard on The Public Diplocast series on our website.

That same evening, Daniel Sepulveda, VP for Global Government Relations, MediaMath moderated a panel discussion on effective frameworks for advancing digital cooperation through multi-stakeholder diplomacy and identifying the required organizational capabilities and partnership mechanisms for future success. Panelists included Jacob Poushter, Senior Researcher, Pew Research Center; Anthony Shop, Co-Founder & Chief Strategy Officer, Social Driver and Chairman, National Digital Roundtable; and Moira Whelan, Founding Partner, BlueDot Strategies. The event was held in partnership with the Digital Diplomacy Coalition.

INNOVATION IN PUBLIC DIPLOMACY

From Somalia to Paris, From Bloomington to Canada

The Fall semester event programming commenced with an intimate conversation with American journalist and novelist Michael Scott Moore, who was abducted in 2012 by a local gang of pirates when on a reporting trip to Somalia. The roundtable, which delved into the 977 days he was held captive that he detailed in his recent memoir, The Desert and the Sea, was moderated by Salpi Ghazarian, Director of the USC Institute of Armenian Studies. Paris Mayor Anne Hidalgo visited CPD and met privately with a group of USC students to share her views on the state of city diplomacy, the Paris 2024 Summer Olympics and her plans for the City of Lights. Our PD Goes Local program then headed out to Indiana University for a panel discussion on the role public diplomacy can play in dealing with adversarial nations such as North Korea. Expert panelists included co-chair of the Nuclear Weapons Abolition Committee Ira Helfand; Senior Researcher at Pew Research Center Jacob Poushter; and Indiana University Professors Emily Metzgar and Mark Minton. As part of USC Annenberg's Trojan Family Weekend programming, CPD's Editorial Manager Lisa Rau moderated a JOVRNALISM panel on digital storytelling using virtual reality tools. Then on November 14, CPD joined forces once again with Center Theatre Group for a behind-the-scenes discussion of the Tony Award-winning Broadway musical Come From Away, which opened at the Ahmanson Theatre in Los Angeles later that month. There to discuss the true story that inspired the musical of the small town in Newfoundland, Canada that welcomed 6,500 travelers after the tragic events of September 11, were Gander's current Mayor Percy Farwell, Producing Director Douglas C. Baker, Theatrical Producer, Cynthia Stroum and Film Festival Director and Curator Jacqueline Lyanga. The evening, which was attended by USC students as well as a local crowd of arts enthusiasts, was moderated by Director of the USC Annenberg School of Communication, Josh Kun.

Video and audio footage can be found for most of these events at CPD's newly launched Instagram account and on our website.

SPOTLIGHT ON CPD RESEARCH

This summer, the U.S. Department of State announced the selection of Big Things Group LLC to lead the USA Pavilion at Expo 2020 Dubai, which will be held October 20, 2020 to April 10, 2021. CPD is the primary academic partner on the winning bid to design and implement a pavilion that showcases the best of American culture, technology and values in the field of mobility in particular. As a strategic partner, the Center will conduct research and evaluation to inform and assess pavilion design strategy. CPD Director Jay Wang joins a diverse and talented set of leaders from across the United States and the U.A.E. to advise Pavilion USA 2020. Expo 2020 Dubai will be the first World Expo to take place in the Middle East-Africa-South Asia region—since the first Expo in 1851 at London’s Crystal Palace—and will be the biggest public diplomacy event of the year.

In November, the Center announced the three newest CPD Research Fellows for the 2018-20 term: Martin Edwards, Associate Professor, School of Diplomacy and International Relations, Seton Hall University; Jennifer Hubbert, Associate Professor, Department of Sociology and Anthropology, Lewis & Clark College; and Ian Thomas, Head of Evaluation for the Arts, British Council. The three non-resident fellows (pictured right) will each conduct research projects on IMF Twitter diplomacy, the future of sister cities and evaluating cultural relations, respectively.

The 2018-19 Doctoral Dissertation Grant was awarded to University of Florida’s Phillip C. Arceneaux (pictured right) for his investigation of the relationship between public diplomacy broadcasting and international law. Arceneaux is the tenth awardee since the grant program was established in 2014.

NETWAR IN CYBERIA: DECODING THE MEDIA MUJAHIDIN

A must-read for policymakers, the new issue of CPD Perspectives on Public Diplomacy features a provocative research article by CPD Research Fellow Ali Fisher, who challenges U.S. government interpretations and assumptions about countering violent extremism in the media space.

Launched in 2009, the CPD Perspectives series intends to showcase critical thinking about public diplomacy. For the full archive, visit our website.
